

Homework help from public television

Public television can be a valuable resource to help your kids with homework. Here's an easy tip that will help your child succeed:

Have your child watch Homework Hotline live on your local New York State public television station. Homework and television mix in this half-hour program geared towards kids in grades five through twelve. Students phone in with homework questions that have them stumped; teachers help them work through the problems in math, science, geography and other curricula.

To get homework questions answered, students can call "dial-a-teacher" at 1-888-986-2345 (toll free) Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday from 4:00 pm to 7:00 pm EST. Get more Homework Hotline help by visiting their website. Look in the Students section of www.thinkbright.org.
